Broken hearts need help to mend...

February is National "Mend A Broken Heart" Month

Dear My Stuff Bags Supporter,

As we've watched the events unfolding in Haiti these past weeks, our hearts ache for the orphans affected by this terrible tragedy. We can't help but think of the awful plight of children who have lost everything – parents, homes and possessions, whether in a distant land or right here at home.

During National "Mend A Broken Heart" Month, an annual observance sponsored by the My Stuff Bags Foundation, we're asking individuals and organizations nationwide to support children who have been abused, neglected, abandoned, or are victims of terrible disasters.

As you know, the My Stuff Bags Foundation's mission is to provide new belongings, comfort and hope to these children, who frequently enter shelters and foster care without any possessions. We rely on the grass-roots support of thousands of caring people who donate much-needed funding, new children's items, and thousands of volunteer hours.

The tough economy has affected many people; our Foundation as well. If you recently donated to the My Stuff Bags Foundation, thank you. But as incidents of child abuse and neglect tend to rise during times of economic hardship, we must continually seek funding to meet the needs of these most vulnerable children. Please give whatever you can, and help us "mend the broken hearts" of children who need to know they haven't been forgotten. Please, be their Valentine.

Very sincerely,

Janeen Holmes
